Either fix it before it was a problem or let users know not to update to iOS 13 until they fixed this issue. Making more books available at a given level would call attention to leveling inconsistencies in the existing materials. I contacted support 2x by email, 5 days later, I get a generic email saying everything should be set. These designations can mean the difference between a student being “at grade level” or “below grade level” and can impact the perception of a student’s ability, both for the student and for the teacher. But district administrators love the assessment because it generates data that seems easy to understand (“a Level H reader is more skilled than a Level E reader”) and appears actionable (“Label and level your library and have students pick from the right bins.”) Irene Fountas and Gay Su Pinnell knew that reading one Level E book does not mean that the child will be able to read other books at the level equally well, and yet their names are on an assessment that sells that myth. As teachers, we are required to spend valuable time administering this poorly constructed assessment on students for whom it was not designed, and to use the data in ways that limit student choice and even limit their access to grade-level content. sleepovers and trips to the farm). Lexile, cited repeatedly in CCSS appendices, analyzes written text and the features that make it objectively complex, such as decodability, sentence length, word choice. In fact, we select strategically from the book choices. But if you've had doubts about the assessment and the ways BAS data is often used, you're on to something... Limited materials An F&P Benchmark Assessment System kit provides us with only two books (one fiction and one nonfiction) for each reading level, so we end up using the books over and over again. “Educators are on shaky ground when a test is used in a way or for a purpose other than that for which it was intended. Most of us instinctively know the books in BAS are not consistent at a given level and not progressively difficult across levels. According to Heinemann, the Benchmark Assessment System was field-tested on “typical students,” but they included in their study only proficient English students who were already reading at grade level (and very few of them at that!) By excluding diverse learners from their study, Heinemann ignored the demographics of our classrooms and missed important factors in determining text difficulty. The books in the assessment represent experiences typical of middle class children (eg. “A gradient is not and was never intended to be a way to categorize or label students, whose background experiences and rate of progress will vary widely. According to Lexile, the BAS Level E book At the Zoo is more similar to the Level H book Trucks than to the companion Level E book provided in the assessment kit. Unfortunately this is a huge bug and for $15 a level- this is a HUGE drawback. Pictures in the books allow some students to cue for words (eg. Please fix! If I could give the app 0 stars I would. Providing more assessment books is challenging because the texts are not authentic, but rather purpose-written assessment materials. “Organizing books by level does not help students engage with books and pursue their own interests.” Fountas and Pinnell have stated, repeatedly, that a leveling system is simply a tool for a teacher to use to match students with books. “A gradient is not a precise sequence through which all students move. For more information, see the developer’s privacy policy. I have been using the app for years. An objective leveling system confirms our own hunches about the books. Any suggestions on playing back the recordings would be very welcome! The developer, Heinemann, indicated that the app’s privacy practices may include handling of data as described below. I’ve heard colleagues say, “I use the Loose Tooth book because it’s a lot easier than the one about the zoo.” (both Level E) or “I skip G and go straight to H.” The Common Core recommends that we use objective measures (Lexile, Dale-Chall, and Flesch-Kincaid are cited in CCSS Appendix A) to evaluate text complexity. I purchased both the app and books to test my students. I do not have an online account, so I email the PDFs out, or open them in my adobe app so I can save them. Best part was that the support person put some of the responsibility on me, telling me I should have emailed the docs (I didn’t know that my data would be unavailable) or I should have been an online data user (more money). It’s time for us to insist on being provided more reliable assessments and being given the flexibility to use more authentic methods for matching our diverse learners with texts they can read. [...] You may want to skip a level if you feel the students need even more challenge.” It’s important that a student moves up levels over time. My 12.9 iPad Pro was updated to iOS 13 last week. While assessing using BAS, we listen to a student read and take “Reading Records” that we’re later expected to analyze in order to determine which of three sources of information - meaning, syntax, visual - the child used for word identification. Classroom libraries need to be inviting places where children are drawn to topics and genres and authors and illustrators that they love. This attention to the disproven three-cueing theory diverts our attention from the fact that an error is simply evidence that the child was unable to apply phonics to accurately read the word. If a child chooses a book that is too hard for them to read, they may stretch themselves and enjoy that book for a period of time.” The data from the assessment should be used to determine what leveled books are needed in the classroom library and which students should read which books. “The point is not simply to ‘move up’ levels but to increase their breadth of reading by applying their strategies to many different kinds of texts.” After each student’s reading level has been determined, students of like levels should be grouped together. Next, I do their online chat and explain the situation. It would be nice if I could do the item analysis after I am finished with the assessment so the kids are sitting and waiting for the comprehension piece. Use the new Fountas & Pinnell Benchmark Assessment Reading Record Apps to electronically code, score, analyze, and manage reading records. And while students are choosing books that interest them, the teacher is there to help them learn how to make good choices so the books they select are ones that they can read and enjoy. “While there are other issues to consider in terms of establishing instructional reading levels, in terms of reliability, it may make more sense to focus on more technically sound procedures available. Learn More Developer Website App Support Privacy Policy My district, like so many others, uses Fountas and Pinnell’s Benchmark Assessment System (BAS) as the primary measure of student reading progress. climbing and snow plow), while students without that background knowledge and vocabulary must sound the words out. Take responsibility for your mistake and help users who have paid you good money! I really like this app a lot! It saves time giving the assessment and reduces the amount of copying I need to do. The following data may be collected but it is not linked to your identity: Privacy practices may vary, for example, based on the features you use or your age. The book Trucks is not a good indicator of whether an English-learner will be able to read other books labeled H by Fountas and Pinnell because it is written in present tense and is more decodable (despite snow plow), even when compared to the other BAS Level H book, which includes tricky-to-decode irregular past-tense verbs. “... we have decades of research that demonstrates the extent to which students’ vocabulary knowledge relates to their reading comprehension.” If a child does well on one level, she should be assessed on the next. More information about the ODMS is available at the Heinemann website using keyword search term ‘BAS ODMS’ 2. Attempting to use the data collected from BAS has led many of us to make instructional decisions Irene Fountas and Gay Su Pinnell have spoken against: What BAS Data Tells Us: What Fountas and Pinnell Say: “He reads at level H.” “The truth is that children can read books on a wide variety of levels, and in fact, they experience many different levels of books across the day.” A child who reads a Level G book about bubbles during the assessment will be able to read Level G books about polar bears, friendship, and transportation. Due to lack of transparency about its formula, the F&P leveling system is notably absent in CCSS recommendations. I haven't figured out how to play back the recordings I make of the students reading. “Although oral-passage reading rate and accuracy are good measures of overall reading ability because they measure word-recognition speed and accuracy, the classification of ‘miscues’ is unreliable, invalid, and a waste of the teacher’s time.” — Whole Language Lives On Assessing students with BAS takes approximately 20 minutes per student, but more reliable oral reading fluency assessments take just 1 minute. preschool students, native English speakers) then it is imperative that the test be used solely for those it was designed to assess.” — Toward the Peaceful Coexistence of Test Developers, Policy Makers, and Teachers Say we were to use the assessment only on proficient English speakers who are reading at grade level and we ignored the miscue analysis, could BAS work then? Well, work to do what? We have never written about leveling students.” A student’s reading level should be communicated to the child so she can select “just right books.” “We certainly never intended that children focus on a label for themselves in choosing books in classroom libraries. I am then told that it will be 2-3 weeks before the app is fixed, they have to wait for Apple, and they cant help me access any information on their app. They never did their job so now they have made my job harder by cutting off access to all of my data for up to 3 weeks. BEFORE PURCHASING 1. For more from Fountas and Pinnell. Download this free app and then make individual in-app purchases to gain access to the specific content you need. Selecting the BAS book The Zoo may lead us to believe that a student reads at Level E, but a closer look reveals that the same child might do just as well reading the Level H book, Trucks. We see the problem with these limited materials when struggling readers memorize the predictable texts or get stuck because they lack the background knowledge required by the two books at a particular level. Heinemann has issued three editions of the assessment but has yet to produce any additional texts. It may be surprising to many teachers that some of the most valid and reliable measures of a student’s overall reading level include simple measures of word-recognition accuracy and speed, in and out of context (Rasinski, 2000; Torgesen, Wagner, Rashotte, Burgess, & Hecht, 1997). ” — Toward the Peaceful Coexistence of Test Developers, Policy Makers, and Teachers Listening to students read is important for many reasons, but the books and scoring sheets provided in the BAS are not worthy of the time we’re asked to devote to them. It is HIGHLY RECOMMENDED that potential purchasers view an in-depth video of how the application works at READING RECORD APPS The Reading Record Apps are for use by professional reading educators or individuals willing to learn how to take reading record assessments. After being updated, only some of the information saved on my iPad is visible, I can no longer access some 18 tests I have done in the past month, can no longer assess additional students. My question is why didn't they beta test this? After just the third practice I had it down. If a test has been developed specifically for a certain population (eg. The Benchmark Assessment Reading Record Applications (BAS1, BAS1 3rd Ed, BAS2, BAS2 3rd Ed, and SEL) MUST also use the Fountas and Pinnell Online Data Management System.
